Fired at Escaping Thieves

Residents on Elm street and vicinity were considerably disturbed early Monday morning by the report of several pistol shots fired near the old Locke house. For several days many theories as to the origin of the shots were put forward, and exciting accounts were heard on all sides. Exact information did not seem to be available.

It was finally discovered that the shots were fired by night officers Napier and Morse. For some time past complaints in regard to thieving have been frequently received and Officers Napier and Morse have been endeavoring to locate the guilty parties.

About half past one Monday morning they saw a team near the Locke house which looked interesting. The occupants of the team, however, not wishing to be investigated, started off at a swift pace towards the square as soon as they saw the officers. The latter shouted to them to stop, and finding that method to be of no avail, fired several shots, hoping to frighten the men into submission. The opposite effect was the result, however, as the men increased their speed and soon disappeared, leaving no trace of their identity. The police believe, nevertheless, that if found, the men would be able to explain some of the thefts which have recently been committed.

No Flower Show on Sunday

Finding that in order to open the Flower Show on Sunday it would be necessary to take out a license, the committee have decided to have the exhibit on Saturday afternoon and evening only.

Anyone who has purchased tickets intending to use them on Sunday can have their money back upon application at the ticket office at the hall on the day of the exhibit, or by applying to the committee.

SESSION ENDS WITH A VETO

Taft Declares Cotton Bill Not Sufficiently Considered

GOES OVER UNTIL DECEMBER

Great Amount of Work Accomplished by Congress Since It Was Called In Extraordinary Session to Pass Reciprocity Bill—Many Other Measures of Importance Disposed of by Democrats and Insurgent Republicans

Washington, Aug. 23.—The extraordinary session of the Sixty-second congress, the most active session in many years, closed at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, following the receipt at 2:02 of the president's veto of the cotton tariff revision bill, the final attempt of the Democrats for adjustment of the tariff without waiting for the report and recommendations of the president's tariff board.

The veto message, with the vetoed bill, was referred to the house ways and means committee and will not be heard of again until next December.

As soon as the president's veto had been read, Democratic Leader Underwood announced that inasmuch as the Democrats did not have a sufficient number of votes to pass the bill over the veto it would be referred to committee.

The veto was received with a noisy demonstration. There were scarcely a hundred members in the chamber when its reading was begun. Underwood's motion for reference of the whole matter was agreed to without objection.

The president, in vetoing the cotton bill, based his objections to the bill largely upon the fact that the tariff board had not as yet had time to submit a report on the schedule. He also declared that the cotton bill was adopted without any investigation or information of a satisfactory character as to its effect upon the cotton industry.

For the first time in sixteen years the Democrats have had control of the house, and with the insurgent Republicans in the senate they have been able to pass many important measures.

Called in a session extraordinary on April 4 by President Taft for the purpose of passing his Canadian reciprocity bill, congress has labored and sweated during the hottest days of the summer, and in the 121 legislative days 3344 bills have been introduced in the senate and 14,066 in the house.

Not content with passing President Taft's reciprocity bill, the Democrats took up the matter of tariff revision against the president's wishes, and the session has furnished the unusual spectacle of the president putting his veto on four of the most important bills that were passed.

President Taft vetoed the woolen bill, the farmers' free list and the statehood bills, the latter, until its provisions for the recall of the judiciary was removed. With the veto on the cotton bill the president established a unique record.

Many important laws have been enacted by this session. The reciprocity bill, which the last congress refused to pass, was made a law after long debate.

The reapportionment bill, increasing the number of congressmen, and the campaign publicity bill were two other important pieces of legislation which the extra session enacted. And after the strenuous protest of the president to the recall of the judiciary, and his veto, Arizona and New Mexico were admitted to the union with the recall eliminated.

This session has also been marked for its efforts toward international peace. Arbitration treaties with France and Great Britain and loan treaties with Honduras were considered, but did not pass.

WORKS ON ROCKPILE

South Carolina Woman Does Not Complain of Her Punishment

Spartanburg, S. C., Aug. 23.—Bessie Smith, 20 years old, was yesterday clad in stripes and sent with other convicts to the rock pile. She is the first white woman ever thus treated in this city.

She is taking the punishment stoically, and last night, after a hard day's work at the quarry, smilingly remarked that she was mighty tired but would feel better after a bath. The woman was convicted of keeping a disreputable house.

Woman Burns to Death
Scituate, R. I., Aug. 24.—Miss Susan Murphy, 58, living in this village, was burned to death when the lamp which she was carrying exploded, setting fire to her clothing. Miss Murphy had recently come into a $10,000 legacy left by relatives.

Many Appointments Fall
Washington, Aug. 24.—During the extra session of congress there were thirty-five presidential nominations which failed of confirmation by the senate. Three nominations were rejected.

AUSTIN IS SET FREE

Lack of Evidence Against Maine Man Charged With Murder

Milo, Me., Aug. 23.—Charles O. Austin, the watchman at the Lakeview wool mills who has been under arrest charged with the murder of Nicholas Grimshaw, a fireman at the same place, was discharged late yesterday after a preliminary hearing before Judge Gerrish of the county court.

Austin was discharged on motion of his counsel, which was concurred in by the county attorney, and which was made on the ground of lack of evidence. No testimony was put in by the defense.

The trial was held in a public hall, which was crowded to the doors. The announcement of the prisoner's discharge was followed by a demonstration.

METEOR DAZZLES SAILORS

Visitor From the Heavens Drops Into Sea Off Sable Island

Boston, Aug. 22.—A meteor which was of remarkable size exploded and dropped into the Atlantic ocean on the night of Aug. 17, according to Chief Officer Muhldorff and two other members of the crew of the steamer Texas, from Copenhagen.

The Texas was east of Sable Island. About 11:15 o'clock the meteor was sighted. Muhldorff judged that it exploded when more than fifty miles away from the steamer. The flash dazzled the chief officer, quartermaster and lookout so that they had difficulty in seeing clearly for half an hour afterwards.

JURY SAYS MAINE FARMER WAS SLAIN

Was First Supposed That Jacobson Committed Suicide

New Sweden, Me., Aug. 24.—A verdict that August Jacobson did not commit suicide, but was brutally murdered, was signed by the coroner's jury which investigated his death.

The body of Jacobson, a New Sweden farmer, was found behind his house on the morning of June 12. He was at first supposed he had taken his own life, but this week the county officials decided as a result of their investigation to exhumate the body. This was done, and the inquest followed.

The juryman found that Jacobson met his death by four rifle shots, the deed being done by some one unknown to them.

IN DANGER OF STARVATION

Roundup to Save Lives of Thousands of Elk in Wyoming

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 24.—Sportsmen and former cowboys from various parts of eastern Washington and central Idaho have gone to Jackson's Hole, Wyo., to assist the state game wardens, United States cavalry soldiers and ranchers in rounding up between 25,000 and 30,000 elk and driving them to less settled territory.

Old timers here say that a roundup is a difficult task at this time of year, but the game wardens think this is the only way to save the bands from being exterminated, as the restriction of the open range has resulted in the loss of fully 5000 animals a year by starvation, despite the fact that fodder has been provided by ranchers in the district and the legislature of the state of Wyoming.

This is the first attempt at an organized roundup of elk in America, and the outcome will be watched with interest by sportsmen all over the country.

More Postal Savings Banks

Washington, Aug. 23.—Seventy more postoffices have been designated by Postmaster General Hitchcock as postal savings banks. Among the first class offices named are Manchester, N. H.; Pawtucket, R. I., and Burlington, Vt.

Women Drawn as Jurors

Tacoma, Aug. 24.—Thirty-four women are included in the venire of 129 jurors drawn for the September term of the superior court.

Suicide in a Cell

Hartford, Aug. 24.—Romano Vincenzo committed suicide at the county jail here by hanging himself with his leather belt.

THE PRINCIPAL WINNER

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When the American troops were fighting their way across Cuba, Captain Timberlake, commanding a party of hankers, noticed a coffin lying not far from the road.

That evening in camp Captain Timberlake was chatting upon the events of the day with the adjutant and the major of his regiment, talking about who had been killed, who wounded, how the Spaniards fought and how they had the advantage of the Americans in the matter of arms and smokeless powder, when Timberlake spoke of the strange sight of a coffin lying beside the road.

If men have not the curiosity of women, and the statement has been denied by the latter, they have a trait equally peculiar. Men, especially those who lead eventful lives, are prone to bet about everything which is a matter of opinion or hazard. The question came up between these officers whether there was a corpse in the coffin or whether there was not. One of the party had noticed a cemetery on the way not far from the line of march and suggested that a funeral had been interrupted by the fight, the mourners had fled and the coffin spilled out of the hearse. There was doubtless an unburied corpse in it.

Now, the outcome of this suggestion did not result, as might have been expected, in the burial of a corpse, but a bet. The major made the suggestion, and Captain Timberlake offered to bet him $10 even that the coffin was empty.

The stakes having been put up, Captain Timberlake called Pat Mulcahey, a recruit picked up just before leaving the States, and told him to go back half a mile and look out not far from a bridge over a creek for a coffin. He was to discover whether it contained a corpse or whether it was empty.

A full moon stood about an hour high and made all nearly as light as day. A desultory firing was still going on, but had nearly died out. Pat crossed the bridge and about a hundred yards beyond saw the moonlight reflected from a number of points on the brass ornaments on the coffin. Pat went on till he got near enough to see what the object was, then stopped. A coffin probably with a dead body in it at night in a lonely spot did not appeal to him. He was wondering how he could determine what he had been ordered to discover without getting any closer to the casket when the lid seemed to lift of itself, and the moon lighted up a white face.

"Howly mother!" cried Pat, crossing himself, and, turning, beat a hasty retreat. Reaching the other side of the creek, he paused for another look behind him. What he saw froze the marrow in his bones. The corpse was coming with its coffin on its shoulder.

Pat tried to run, but for a time his legs refused to carry him. It was only when the specter reached the hither side of the bridge and seemed to be coming right down on him that his terror had a different effect, and with a howl he set off like the wind for camp.

Captain Timberlake, the major and the others were sitting in a circle waiting for the decision of the bet when Pat approached. As he drew near them the soldier reassured himself, and he slowed his steps till he came down to a walk. Approaching the group, he saluted.

"Well, Pat," said his commander, "who has won?"

"If ye please, sir, what's the bet?"

"The major bets the coffin has a corpse in it. I bet that it is empty."

"The corpse was in it when I went there, and now it's out of it."

"What do you mean?"

"The corpse got out when I was lookin' at the coffin, and now he's comin' with it on his shoulder."

There was a burst of laughter.

"O! got me pay in my pocket," pulling out a roll of bills. "O! I bet it all that he is."

Several men standing about, ready to take advantage of the greenhorn, covered his money 10 to 1. The bets had barely been made when a man with a coffin on his shoulder approached and asked half in Spanish and half in English where he could get a pass.

There was another burst of laughter.

The captain looked around for Pat. He was nowhere to be seen.

"I've won and Pat has won," said Timberlake. "Now we'll hear this man's story. But first let me tell you something I happen to know. The poor class of Cubans hire coffins for their dead. The body is placed in the coffin before the funeral and taken to the cemetery in it. There it is removed and buried without any covering. Since the lid is not screwed down they use hinges. This man was not going to a funeral; he was carrying the casket away from a cemetery after the corpse had been taken out of it."

"You are right," said the Cuban. "I was carrying the coffin from the cemetery when the battle began. To escape the bullets I lifted the lid and got inside. I stayed there till the firing had nearly died away, when I proceeded on my journey. But now there are soldiers everywhere, and I would like a pass to get home."

He was sent (leaving his load till his return) to headquarters, where he secured his pass.

Pat was the chief winner, all bets being decided in his favor.

EGGENTRIC WAGNER.

A Glimpse of the Famous Composer in One of His Moods.

Richard Wagner, the composer, needed a good deal of managing, and Frau Cosima was always tactful, according to Judith Gautier's "Wagner at Home." When the author hesitated before accepting Wagner's invitation to an excursion she says Frau Cosima made signs to her and, coming nearer, said in a low voice: "Do not refuse, he would be angry. And let him manage it all; let him take the lead. If you do not wish to grieve him."

Later on she gives another curious scene: "Behind the house, in that court which formed a part of the garden, and from which the carriage drive started, there was a high swing, which the children were allowed to use very carefully, and with which the older people sometimes amused themselves. One day Mme. Cosima was sitting on the narrow board. Wagner offered to start the swing and give her a good flight through the air. All went well for a time, but, little by little, the motion became more rapid; higher and still higher went the swing. In vain Mme. Cosima begged for mercy. Carried away by a kind of frenzy, the master paid no attention and the incident seemed to have a terrifying effect.

"Cosima grew white; her hold relaxed, and she was about to fall. 'Do you not see that she is fainting?' I cried, throwing myself toward Wagner. He grew pale in his turn, and the danger was quickly averted. But, as the poor woman continued to be dizzy and trembling, the master concluded it would be wise to create a diversion. He ran rapidly toward the house, and by the aid of the shutters, the moldings and protections of the stones, he climbed nimbly up the side and, reaching the balcony of the floor above, leaped over it.

"He had obtained the desired effect, but in replacing one evil by another. Trembling with anxiety, Cosima turned to me, saying under her breath: 'Above all things, do not notice him; do not look surprised, or you can never tell where he will end.'"

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.

The English Method of Dealing Out Supplies by the Week.

In the matter of small savings and watchfulness of expenditure the English housewife is ahead. For example, the English housekeeper deals out to her servants the week's allowance of sugar, rice, flour, coffee and all other household provisions that are kept in quantity, and requires an account of it all to be rendered, the thing having been brought to so fine a point that she knows the exact amount of each article requisite for her family, allowing so much to each individual and that quantity being sufficient, as she knows by experience, two ounces of tea, for instance, being regarded as a week's supply for each single individual, one-half pound of sugar, three and one-half pounds of meat for a woman and five and one-fourth for a man—facts which the housekeeper probably learned from her mother before her—knowing, moreover, the greater variety of the simpler kinds required.

All of these stores she sets down in her housekeeping book as she gives them out, and she does not fail on the next dispensing day to consult her dates and if anything be left over in the cook's hands not accounted for to subtract that from the amount to be newly issued. And in England servants expect this. So far from being indignant with it they would feel as if there were no guiding hand behind them if left undone and they given their head in an overflowing store-room, as servants are with us.

In fact, there is no saving which the housewife across the water considers too small to practice or as beneath her dignity.—Exchange.

Sir John Rose at Great Length.
An accomplished English barrister was Sir John Karslake. In height he was six feet four inches.

A provincial newspaper in reporting a case in which he was engaged on circuit laconically described the opening for the complainant as follows:

"Sir John Karslake, as soon as the defendant's case was concluded, rose at great length to reply."

Very Simple.

"I've been working two or three evenings making an umbrella stand," says the man who has taken up arts and crafts endeavor.

"Two or three evenings!" exclaims the other man. "Why waste all that time? Why don't you lean it in a corner or stick it in the ground?"—Judge.

The Trouble.

"What's the trouble?" inquired the judge.

"This lady lawyer wants to make a motion," explained the clerk, "but her gown is too tight."—Washington Herald.

A Lesson For George.

Betty—George intends to have his own way in everything when we are married. Grace—Why are you going to marry him, then? Betty—Just to relieve his mind of a false impression.

Can You Beat It?

"I'm afraid, Tom, dear, you will find me a mine of faults. He—Darling, it shall be the sweetest labor of my life to correct them. She (daring up)—Indeed, you shan't!—Boston Transcript.

Perseverance.

Perseverance is more prevailing than violence, and many things which cannot be overcome when they are together yield themselves up when taken little by little.

CAMPAIGN MOVE BY DEMOCRATS

Federation of Precinct Clubs
Organized at Washington

A PROGRESSIVE FOR PRESIDENT

Senators Owen and Chamberlain Leading Movement to Check Trading or Trafficking on Floor of National Convention For Nominations—Wilson Said to Be Favorably Considered For Head of Ticket

Washington, Aug. 24.—The Democratic Federation of Precinct clubs was organized at a meeting in the Democratic conference room of the United States senate. The object is the control of the next Democratic national convention with the view to the nomination of a progressive candidate for the presidency and the adoption of a progressive platform.

Senator Owen of Oklahoma and Senator Chamberlain of Oregon started the movement. Both of them expressed confidence in the success of the plan. The conference was attended by many Democratic senators and representatives and was followed by still another meeting last night, when a charter for the organization was drafted.

According to Owen the supreme court of the District of Columbia will be petitioned to sanction the charter of the national organization, which in turn will recognize the precinct clubs to be organized all over the country.

"The purpose of the Democratic Federation of Precinct clubs is to see that the people control the next Democratic national convention," explained Owen. "The organization will be committed to the candidacy of no man for the presidential nomination, but will fight to see that a progressive candidate thoroughly responsive to the demands of the people is chosen to lead the Democracy in the next national campaign on a platform acceptable to the progressive thought of the country."

"The organization will see to it that there is no trading or trafficking on the floor of the Democratic national convention for the nominations. The convention will not be characterized by political deals wherein cabinet positions and ambassadorships are traded for the promise of votes for aspiring candidates for the presidential nomination. The Democracy will choose a candidate on his merits and record."

"The precinct clubs all over the country will be encouraged to fight for the control of the local Democratic organization with a view to sending delegates to the national convention who will be actuated solely by what they believe to be for the best interests of the people. The organization of this federation has been well considered and its details carefully planned. Many men prominent in the Democratic party have been approached, and they have given their endorsement to the plan."

Senator Owen is himself favorable to the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for the presidency, and it is believed that the Federation of Precinct clubs may be friendly to the candidacy of the Jersey governor. At any rate, it is regarded as certain that the organization will oppose Governor Harmon of Ohio.

BALDWIN IS WILLING

Says He Would Not Decline Nomination For Vice Presidency

New Haven, Aug. 23.—Referring to the announcement of the plan of prominent Connecticut Democrats to urge Governor Baldwin as a candidate for the nomination of vice president, the governor says:

"I have understood that my name has been mentioned in connection with the vice presidency in several states in the east and middle west. If it is thought by my party friends that my nomination would tend in any way to strengthen Democratic success next year and it comes to me I certainly should not decline it."

COMPLETES TRIP TODAY

Wood Prepared to Finish Last Leg of Long Journey

Castleton, N. Y., Aug. 24.—On the last lap of his flight from St. Louis to New York, Harry N. Atwood has his aeroplane hitched to an apple tree on top of a hill here, overlooking the Hudson river and Albany, eight miles to the north. Today Atwood expects in two "bird hops" to complete his journey to New York, landing in Sheepshead bay with a possible preliminary circle over Governor's island.

Atwood hopes to sail over the 134 miles between here and New York before mid-afternoon.

When he landed here Atwood in ten days had flown 1131 miles from his starting point in St. Louis without any mishaps more serious than losing his way, diverging from his course in a run from Lyons, N. Y., to Auburn.

BREAKS THE STRAPS OF ELECTRIC CHAIR

Murderer Struggles Twenty-Eight Minutes Before Death

Eddyville, Ky., Aug. 23.—Oliver Locke, a negro wife murderer, while paying the penalty for his crime in the electric chair at the penitentiary here, struggled for twenty-eight minutes and finally broke the leather straps that bound his legs and arms.

Two thousand volts of electricity had passed through his body. The negro toppled to the floor and examination by the prison physicians showed that he was reviving. He was again strapped to the chair and 2500 more volts were used before life was extinct.

TAFT SPEAKS TO VETERANS

Contests of the Past, Present and Near Future

DAY OF DEMAGOGUE IS PAST

Solution of Problem of Concentrated Wealth Will Be Reached Peacefully

—Peace Treaties Not Breeders of War and Will Not Hurt Monroe Doctrine—Contest For Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 24.—On the eve of his forty-day swing around the circle on which Republican leaders expect him to define the issues for the campaign of 1912, President Taft last night announced himself as unalterably opposed to the "nostrums" of reform which he declared "demagogues" and "theoretical extremists" have advanced for the solution of the problem of concentrated wealth in this country. The day of the demagogue, he said, had passed.

The president spoke to the veterans of the G. A. R. and in the struggle which they went through fifty years ago, and the one which he said now confronts this nation he found a striking analogy.

In the end, the president said, the peace-loving, straight-thinking people of this country will be victorious, but the fight itself may be longer because it will be fought out to the end without bloodshed and the roar of the battlefield.

"Higher aims for the betterment of society, these new evils growing out of the concentration of wealth and these combinations which, properly controlled, are a great good in the reduction of the cost of production," said the president, "have invited from the active-minded of today suggestions of remedies that are so extreme that the medicine to many of us seems worse than the disease."

"Those of us who are charged with the responsibility, and sobered with the difficulties, find ourselves in the middle of the road resisting the tendency to specialism on the one hand and the inertia of reactionary contentment with present evils and ambition for greater concentration of financial power on the other; but we are gradually solving the problem."

Peace was really the subject of the president's speech to the veterans, but he said he could not miss an opportunity to draw an analogy between the contests of the past and those of the present and the near future. Turning aside from the purely national question, he took the general arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France, which the senate foreign relations committee sought to amend, and which part of that committee labelled "breeders of war."

In none of the objections made by the senate committee to the treaties could the president find substance which would lead him to change his mind as to their desirability. That they would prove breeders of war he could not conceive; that the Monroe doctrine might be held by European nations to be subject to arbitration he found was illogical and unfounded. If the senate rejects the treaties, the president said, he would have to abide by its decision, but that he intends to keep up his campaign before the country to have them ratified he made plain also.

Not in several years have the Grand Army veterans turned out in as large numbers as they did for yesterday's parade. The weather was ideal for the long march. President Taft arrived at 9 o'clock and the main parade began to move as soon as the presidential party reached the reviewing stand.

The first business session of the national encampment will be held today when the election of officers will be held. The contest for the election as commander-in-chief is between General John McElroy of Washington, editor of the National Tribune, and Harvey J. Trimble of Illinois. Both sides claim equal confidence and all concede the canvass is exceedingly close.

German Cruiser in Buzzards Bay to Conduct Torpedo Practice

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 24.—The German cruiser Bremen arrived in Buzzards bay and it is announced will conduct torpedo practice in Buzzards bay. A tug has been engaged here to assist in the maneuvers.

Considerable speculation has been caused as to the right of a foreign warship thus to indulge in military operations in United States waters.

A launch, in charge of Lieutenant Lutzjohan came up to the city from the cruiser. In answer to questions Lutzjohan said:

"We are here in Buzzards bay to have torpedo practice. I do not know how long we are going to stay here."

T. R. SAYS MOVEMENT WOULD BE CALAMITY

Does Not Want to Be Boosted For Nomination in 1912

Pittsburg, Aug. 23.—In a letter to A. P. Moore, publisher of the Pittsburg Leader, Theodore Roosevelt emphatically asks not to be boosted for the presidential nomination in 1912. He says:

"I very gladly appreciate your kind and friendly feeling, but I am sure you will understand me when I say that I must ask not only you but every friend I have to see to it that no movement be made to bring me forward for the nomination in 1912. I feel that I have a right to ask all my friends, if necessary, actively to work to prevent any such movement. I esteem it a genuine calamity if such a movement were undertaken."

RALPH IRELAND KILLED

Bursting Tire Causes Disaster During an Automobile Race

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 23.—Bursting of a tire on a racing car driven by Ralph Ireland, as he turned out on the Elgin course to allow Hugh Hughes, driving another racer, to pass, resulted in a smashup that cost Ireland his life. His mechanic, Frank O'Brien, was seriously hurt, but will probably recover.

Spectators of the accident declare Ireland did not slacken speed, approximately seventy miles an hour, when he turned out to allow Hughes to pass. The rear outside tire failed to stand the extra strain and the tire burst, throwing the machine into a ditch, turning turtle and pinioning Ireland beneath it. O'Brien was thrown to one side.

UP TO THE PRESIDENT

Will Decide Bank Case Over Which Cabinet Officers Disagreed

Washington, Aug. 24.—Secretary MacVegh will not make any decision at this time upon Attorney General Wickersham's report, which holds that the relations of the National City bank of New York and the National City company may be a transgression of the national banking laws.

Because of what is believed to be a difference of opinion between the two cabinet officers all the papers in the case will be sent to President Taft at Beverly.

NOTICE

The following was written by the head of one of Boston's large furniture houses and its moral cannot be mistaken:

"The question is often asked, Where has that vast volume of business gone? the answer is, the firms that still continue in business are doing about $1,000,000 more business than they did twenty-five or thirty years ago. All the department stores, almost unknown in the housefurnishing business in those days, are not doing over $2,000,000. Also the wholesalers who retail do about $1,000,000. This still leaves about $16,000,000 lost to Boston. Where has it gone? Vanished like mist on the mountain side. The question is easily answered. It has gone to the splendid stores that have been established in the suburban cities and towns. The most alluring advertisements, published in the latest newspapers in the world, fail to bring back to Boston sixteen million dollars of business in the housefurnishing line; and in my opinion it will be more difficult in the future; if the dealers outside of Boston, continue to pursue their present aggressive policy,— increase their splendid stocks of merchandise and continue to give their patrons value received. I believe that the people are becoming tired and sick of the old and threadbare ads marked down from $50.00 to $24.98. This method of advertising has been worked to death, and in time will in itself eliminate the best and most intelligent trade from Boston."

Almost Caught by Bogy Man

We don't believe you have heard of it, but it is an actual fact that a bogy man almost got the Selectmen. We refer to the Selectmen of the Town of Andover, and the bogy man was an old-fashioned blue law idea of the observance of the Sabbath. Now we aren't going to say one word against a proper observance of the Sabbath, because we believe thoroughly in it. It is probable that the bars are being let down more rapidly than they ought to be along the line of observing the Sabbath day, and its recognition by the average man and woman of the present time. But when old bogy "blue law" gets busy as he did in this case, we really can't help calling attention to it.

The Florists and Gardeners planned months ago for their annual exhibition on Saturday and Sunday, September 2 and 3. The second date was chosen by men and women whose regard for the Sabbath day, whose interest in all things religious, stamped them as among the best people of our community. They wouldn't do a thing that would bring discredit upon the Lord's Day any more than would the ministers of Andover, or any of the other good people, but when somebody, and we don't know who, (and we say it without any suggestion of criticism) discovered that the show was to be held for its second day on a Sunday, hands went up in holy horror, and the "Honorable Board" was promptly appealed to.

At any other time, it is doubtful if any serious attention would have been given to it, but coming on a Wednesday evening when the Chairman of the Board was preparing to depart for his usual attendance at the mid-week service, and when the other members were thinking on religious subjects, it was a serious time for those who had the responsibility for this terrible wrecker of Andover morals. The Chairman was so disturbed that he felt obliged to even forego his church meeting on that evening, and fortunately finding the second member of the Board at home, he not having started for his regular service, they decided after careful consideration that the morals of the people of Andover could not possibly stand for such an objectionable affair as this. A show on Sunday! Never! Of course entirely forgetting that they or their agents had several times let the Town Hall for shows on Sunday that would serve not one whit more the morals and character building of the community if indeed as much as would this collection of nature's color.

We shall at once call the attention of those who direct the regular shows of the Boston Horticultural society, and the flower shows of several other cities and towns, to the serious damage they are doing to the morals of the Commonwealth by having public exhibitions of God's beautiful flowers on the Sabbath day. By all means instead, let the boys sneak off into the backwoods and play baseball out of sight and sound. Let the girls parade the streets, and paddle their canoes on the river without restriction. Let men and women go electric car riding and automobileing. Let the picnic grounds and parks, with their popcorn and fizzes, charm and delight people as they have for so many years; all would indeed be so much better for the morals of the community than this pernicious and terrible suggestion of an amateur flower show on Sunday.

While we must acknowledge that the sentiment of the town will probably approve this action of the Selectmen, we feel that the Selectmen should certainly do some sort of penance for thus breaking up the plans of the promoters of the Flower Show. We insist that each and every member of the Board shall attend church on Sunday, September 3. Morning services held in all the churches at 10.30 a.m. Incidentally, may we suggest that the Flower Show will be held only on Saturday, September 2.

Bugs and Bugs

It was Wednesday afternoon. Dressed in our khaki trousers, heavy farm boots, and broad-brimmed straw hat, we probably looked as much like a farmer as we felt. Certainly we felt that it was rather good to be outdoors, using a shovel and a hoe, and getting pretty close in touch with at least as much of Nature as could be picked up by either one of those two implements.

Two young men, booted and spurred, appeared upon the scene. They wanted a drink of water, and were directed where to find a faucet and a drinking cup. The voluble one commented loudly, with many oaths, with much freshness, on everything that he saw. A query as to their occupation brought forth the information that they were in the employ of the state, "scouting for gypsy moths." The noisy and profane one is hereby guaranteed to kill gypsy moths at a hundred yards, if gall, impudence, profanity, and general freshness have any merit at all along the line of "sure death to bugs."

This fresh young man was no credit to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. We don't believe that he could be trusted to do his duty as far as he could be seen, because of the very characteristics that stuck out all over him so prominently. He is of the type that brings discredit upon state departments entrusted with very important work to do. He may possibly pose as one of the most efficient men that the state sends out on this work, but he wouldn't last twenty-four hours in a private institution where merit, quiet confidence, and activity with hands and brain, instead of mouth, are the chief characteristics.

We commend to the State Forester a review of his force of scouts, and suggest that there is at least one of them who should have a parasite set to work on him at once. As an owner of several acres of woodland, we prefer gypsy moths to this particular specimen of "moth scout."

Beautiful New England

The eternal hills! How beautiful they are in these opening autumn days. It was the writer's good fortune to have a day among those of the hills that make up the Berkshire range, and he is confident that he is just a little bit better satisfied with this world of ours than he was before, because of that twenty-four hours in the shadow of Greylock, at the foot of the range that runs down from Greylock along the edge of the Deerfield valley, and swinging around back by the other route out through the Little River region between Pittsfield and Springfield. A friend who had just returned from the region of the Thousand Isles, where the view of the Adirondacks and the lakes and all that make up that beautiful territory, draw to it each year thousands of pilgrims, expressed the sentiment that in all the travel nothing had seemed quite so beautiful as this region we are referring to; within the borders of our own Commonwealth.

We travel too far in this world of ours, chasing the attractive thing, looking for the most pleasure that can be found, trying to get a change, when if we would, we might frequently find all these and much more almost at our door. Isn't it true that the world comes to the East, to our very doors, for its most delightful vacation? Not every year, but at least once in the lifetime, the man who travels feels that he must get a glimpse of the great hills of this section, the beautiful valleys and the wonderful stretches of sea coast, if he is to have in his variety of pleasure one of the most charming that any section of the world can give.

The eternal hills, the beautiful valleys, the rare New England coast, the fields and farms! Yes; it is a rare country in which we live, let us enjoy it more, not less. Let us appreciate its charms by making use of them, and glory that it is our good fortune to live in the midst of some of the best of it all.

Tariff "Scoring"

The daily press suggests that there is a wide difference of opinion as to who has scored in the last session of Congress, Republicans or Democrats. Such a difference may exist in some sections of the country, but we don't believe there is the least difference of opinion in this section of the country, where so much was at stake in connection with the recent tariff bills. The woolen and worsted mills of New England, and the cotton mills of the entire country, have been sitting on the ragged edge of business uncertainty for the last year.

That uncertainty is by no means dissipated by the vigorous veto of President Taft of the two tariff measures passed by strong votes of the Democratic party in the special session of Congress just closed. The regular session of Congress comes in again in December. There is no question but that there is a loud call on the part of many people for a distinct step to be made toward free trade, but New England can never stand it, unless steps have been taken one at a time. The bills that have just been vetoed tackled New England by itself, and gave to the operatives in the textile mills an individual problem, not helped at all by the relief that would come if genuine free trade prevailed. This has been a wonderfully rapid growing country. The day will probably come when it will be sufficiently powerful, when its example will have led foreign countries to maintain conditions for operatives similar to ours, for it to share its part of the burden of free trade with the nations of the world, but that time is not here yet.

The unfortunate part of the whole proposition is that when the efforts have been made for reduction, or when any tariff agitation has had its run, the result is set forth in just such messages as those which are now coming from Washington, calling the attention of the country to a Democratic belief that the Democrats have scored, and to a Republican belief that the Republicans have scored. When the tariff problem is taken out of partisan politics, the greatest step that has ever been made toward a solution of a fair and just tax through tariff duties will have been taken. Not until that time will there be an adjustment of all the different interests that will be fair to all parties involved.

Dr. Cowan's Removal

Dr. Clyde R. Cowan, who is meeting with success in Andover as an osteopath physician, has moved his office to new and attractive rooms in the Carter block. In making his removal, Dr. Cowan has also changed his time so that he will be at his Andover office on Mondays and Fridays, from 3 to 7 p.m.

Wedding

CROWLEY-DEMARS

M. J. Crowley, the well-known local tailor, and Miss Florence DeMars of Lawrence were united in marriage on Wednesday afternoon of this week in the Sacred Heart church, So. Lawrence. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Martel.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white crepe de chine and carried bride roses.

Following the ceremony, dinner was served by Caterer Rhodes at the home of the bride, 24 Stevens street, at which only relatives and intimate friends were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Crowley then left for a short wedding trip, after which they will reside at 58 High street.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Crowley are well known here and their many friends all join in wishing them success.

Obituary

HENRY JAQUITH

Henry Jaquith of 14 Morton street, an old resident of the town, was found dead at his home early Saturday morning, his body badly burned owing to the overturning of a kerosene lamp. The deceased was 82 years of age.

Medical Examiner Dow viewed the remains and pronounced death probably due to heart failure, with the fall upon the lamp as a contributory cause.

The funeral service took place on Monday afternoon from the South church and was conducted by Mr. Shipman. Burial was in the South cemetery.

JOHN McNULTY

John McNulty of 52 Stevens street passed away Tuesday morning at the home of his son, John B. McNulty. Besides his son, he is survived by one daughter.

The funeral service was held on Thursday morning from St. Augustine's church. Burial was in Concord.

Commercial School Consolidation

Cannon's Commercial College of Lawrence, controlled by G. C. Cannon of this town, has become affiliated with the Cambridge Commercial School of Cambridge, established and maintained by W. C. Rosebury, and the Rosebury College Company with a capital stock of $75,000 has been formed with a view to establishing a chain of commercial schools. Cannon's college will retain the same management, name and instructors, but will work in co-operation with the Cambridge school.

August 23, 1521, Mexico surrendered to Cortez and became a Spanish province. This was done by aid of native tribes not fully in sympathy with Montezuma. Three hundred and ninety years only, and still much will be needed before Mexico is free from all Spain laid upon her patient back.

J. William Dean has made his clothing store much more attractive by the addition this week of new and modern showcases and a latest styled cash register. With his usually well-stocked store, these new improvements make Mr. Dean's store one of the best shopping places in this vicinity for men shoppers.

ment as Chief Engineer of a new high water service for Boston is a splendid endorsement of his fitting for the work, and of his standing as a waterworks engineer.

Two negro men came up to the outskirts of a crowd where Senator Bailey was making a campaign speech. After listening to the speech for about ten minutes, one of them turned to his companion and asked: "Who am dat man, Sambo?" "Ah don' know what his name am," Sambo replied, "but he certainly do recommen' hisself mos' highly."

Bought Out Coal Business

Benjamin Jaques of Ballardvale has purchased the coal and wood business formerly conducted by I. F. Batchelder. Mr. Jaques has opened an office at 21 Essex street, and is now prepared to serve any and all customers in the most satisfactory way, as regards quality, quantity and price.

Baseball Challenge

The Elks of this town would like to play the winner of the R. C. O. A. Royals series on their first open date. Hoping to hear from the winning team as soon as possible.

Visit Wonderland Next Week

Everyone interested in the temperance question, and especially the children, should visit the Wonderland theatre next Monday or Tuesday evening and see the moving pictures of "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The story of the book, in its original as well as dramatized form, is too well known to need comment. Suffice it to say that it teaches a strong temperance lesson, one that every child should have. The Wonderland management will present 2000 feet of films that will be well worth seeing. Don't miss the opportunity.

Was Guest of Mr. Wood

Prof. H. E. Emery, chairman of the National Tariff Board, visited the Wood Mill Tuesday and conferred with a delegation of prominent worsted and woolen manufacturers, headed by President Wm. M. Wood. Mr. Emery was also a guest at lunch of Mr. Wood at Arden. Among those present were Alfred Ripley, Esq., of Andover, president of the State National Bank of Boston; Walter E. Parker; Nathaniel Stevens and Samuel Stevens of M. T. Stevens Co.; Geo. E. Kuhnhardt; Granville E. Foss, Jr.; Geo. H. Simonds of the Brightwood Mfg. Co.

Natural History Society Outing

A very enjoyable trip to the Arnold Arboretum in Jamaica Plain was taken on Tuesday, August 22, by several members and friends of the Natural History society.

Leaving on the 10.18 train for Boston, changing to the elevated, the Arboretum was reached about 11.30. Entering the Forest Hills gateway, we proceeded to the Administration building where arrangements were made for a guide to show us about the extensive grounds, some 223 acres in area.

After lunching in a little pine grove we visited the propagating beds and nursery for young trees and shrubs. Here are gathered plants from various countries, with reference to ascertaining their hardiness and value in this locality. Here also we met Jackson Dawson, a former resident of Andover, and one whose rare botanical knowledge and skill so much of the success of the Arboretum is due.

"This is my academy, these are my children," said Mr. Dawson, pointing to the shrubs and trees, so many of which he had planted and watched grow to maturity during the many years since he became connected with the work.

While resting here, the bright eyes of one of our young friends discovered Venus shining in the noon-day sky.

Following our guide we trailed along the winding paths up to the top of Bussey Hill, where a fine view of the surrounding country was obtained, then down the slope into a little dale threaded by a winding brook, its banks for many rods fringed by the purple flowers of the Joe Pye Weed, a picture which we hope our cameras were successful in preserving.

On up the steep slope of the hemlock woods we found ourselves on the top of a mighty ledge of pudding-stone, covered with great hemlocks, and ending in a cliff-like wall rising from the valley below. Passing down the other side we soon came to the garden plots where are gathered in family groups most of the ornamental shrubs and vines common to this locality. Limited time permitted only a hasty inspection of these, but we hope to see them again at our leisure.

At the best we could only get an introduction to the wealth of material contained in the Arboretum, but having learned the way, we hope that either as a society or as individuals we may become better acquainted with the details of the work.

The following were in the party: Mrs. Wm. G. Goldsmith, Miss Bessie P. Goldsmith, Mrs. B. M. Allen, Mrs. Hotchkiss, Master Dan Allen, Mrs. F. T. Carlton, Edward Carlton, Miss C. H. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Chase, Miss Florence I. Abbott, Miss Florence A. Parker, Miss E. Swift, Herbert Chase, Geo. B. Ripley, J. E. Holt.

Rhubarb Jelly

This does better made in September as the sap is of a better color and richness. Use only a tablespoonful of water to a pint of stems cut small, unpared, and cook till soft enough to drip well through a fine strainer. Carefully pour off from any sediment the pound for pint as in other jelly. Make on a clear, dry day when evaporation is rapid, and you have the secret of all jelly, and remove as soon as the test shows the jelly state. Ginger root, cinnamon bark, lemon or any other flavor can be added while cooking the stems. This jelly is nice added to gelatine cookery in way of desserts. Dried fruit such as figs, dates or raisins used for layer fillings are improved by the mellow flavor of ripened rhubarb. Pineapple is a good added flavor.

Carpenters Still Champions

The Carpenters for the second time upheld the championship by defeating the Plumbers in a close and exciting game on the playstead on Wednesday afternoon. Up to the fourth inning it looked as if it were the Plumbers' game, but in the fifth inning, with the latter eight runs in the lead, the Carpenters nailed up hit after hit and in this way bored a big hole in the score.

In the sixth inning the Carpenters sawed off three more runs and Pat played his own game from then on by striking out five of the six men to face him. The Plumbers had the game all piped out until in the fifth inning they began to leak and it was here that with two men on bases, Ben Pitman made his two-base hit, scoring both men. It was plain to see that if Connie Mack had a few like Mike Brennan he would have something to talk about. The old-timers also showed that they could come back by upholding their fielding averages and they were always there with the necessary implement (a hit). For the Plumbers Cy Riley excelled in a way to be credited, when, with two men on, he fanned Big Pat and shut off the scoring. The score:

At the Tremont Theatre

"Excuse Me," Henry W. Savage's production of Rupert Hughes' episodic farce inaugurated the season at the Tremont theatre Monday night, and as was expected of it, proved an immediate and immense success.

The novelty of "Excuse Me" is alone sufficient to earn for the production an unusual amount of interest, and this combined with its clean humor, its clever situations and entanglements, and its presentation by a cast that is brilliant, makes the attraction of the piece well nigh irresistible. All of the action of the farce takes place aboard an overland limited train, and the story is nothing more or less than the experiences of a number of widely contrasting types which make up the passenger list, a great many of those experiences being originated or accentuated by the actions of a typical, fat, black, good-natured and characteristically witty porter. A hold-up of the train, which is presented with such careful attention to truthful detail that it provides a real thrill for the audience in its illusion of actuality, brings the journey to a sudden end, and provides the means for the various members of the train party who have managed to get their auras mixed enroute to straighten them out again.

A Savings Bank Library.

The following scheme is about to be set on foot in Brussels for the diffusion of enlightening literature. A central library consisting of the outset of 10,000 choice volumes is to be created there, and any inhabitant of any part of Belgium owning a savings bank book will be entitled to borrow from it and receive by post any book for a period of a fortnight on checking a penny off his savings bank book at the postoffice, his money at the bank serving as a guarantee for payment for books not returned. As there are about 1,500 postoffices in Belgium, this will amount to the creation of a circulating library with 1,500 branches, whose risks will be more than covered by the deposits in the savings banks.—London Standard.

Noble German Actors.

Who shall say that the stage still suffers under a social disadvantage when we learn that fifty German noblemen are now appearing as actors and that six members of reigning families have taken their wives from behind the footlights? Among the aristocratic players are Baron Emil von Kleydorff, Baron von Wagenheim, Count von Lerchenstein and a son of Prince Sayn-Wittgenstein. It is not necessary but historic ambition that governs these people. Presumably they can act, and at least some of them can act well and are popular favorites.—Argonaut.

McDOUGALL'S MUSINGS

A Round-about Paper

The Nova Scotia newspapers are putting on their war paint for the battle that the electors will decide next month. The burning question is whether Premier Laurier and his liberal ministers are to remain in office and confirm President Taft's reciprocity bill, or by voting for the anti-Torles and against, as they are called, the Grangers in this country have Grangers to keep them company in Nova Scotia and Canada. It is dangerous to prophesy unless you know. As I see it, reciprocity will neither ruin Canada nor the United States, but will be good for both countries. It is for Canada to decide, not for us to dictate.

The fashionable hobble-skirt news from Europe has given Mrs. Grundy plenty of gossip lately. A rich man forty-eight years of age is to marry a girl of twenty. Why, these are good ages for marrying—the man is not too old, the woman is not too young. I sincerely hope that when Miss Force gets married it will be a happy union and not a farce. Just when this Force or farce marriage was getting stale, a rich, or what they call a society young lady, makes a runaway marriage with a man she calls Jack, supposed to be a competent, trusty chauffeur. Sir Walter Scott not only gave us splendid novels and poems, but he has also given us some fine songs. "Jock o' Hazeldean" is almost a perfect picture of this girl and her Irish Jack. This Jock o' Hazeldean song has been set to fine music. I recommend this song to all my young musical friends. The last stanza I quote from memory:

"The kirk was decked at morning tide,
The tapers glimmered rare,
The priest and bridegroom wait the bride,
But ne'er a bride was there.
They sought her bath by bower and ha'
The lady was not seen.
She's o'er the border and awa'
Wi' Jock o' Hazeldean."

If there is anything that I despise it is shoddiness or snobbishness. This tendency to be a snob comes out when, as reported in a Boston paper, this "young Lochinvar" who eloped with the girl scorns the report that he is a chauffeur. He says he is far above that, and sells automobile supplies! Don't be a snob, my dear Irish friend. The girl is almost as snobbish when she says that she studied domestic science at college. Could she not have said, "I have brewed the ale and I will drink it, as I can wash a shirt and iron it and boil a potato for my dear Irish boy and myself." A three days' wonder and then the gossips are ready for another subject to gloat over. All I wish to say is that the newspapers that give columns of their space to trifling things like Geraghty's marriage to Julia French show their snobbish tendency. Can they not say and have done with it that they wish Geraghty Jack and Julia French to be "happy, happy, and never have to drink out of a dry cappy."

The news from Liverpool, England, about the strike of freight handlers and others should teach a lesson to everybody never to strike. As to the merits or demerits of this bad business it is not for me to decide. A French mob is easily quieted by soldiers; an English mob is not, and hates soldiers and policemen. All strikes should be avoided, and a little tact on both sides often heals the breach. This determination of employers to be dictators, and their unrest among workmen who are unable to dictate, is a dangerous state to be in.

Our American papers are not giving the prominence to the Morocco question that its importance demands. France may be advised to avoid war by making a few concessions satisfying to the pride of Germany. As I see it, it will be a sad day for the world when England and France join in fighting Germany—the three civilized countries of Europe trying to cut each other's throats. France has not forgotten and never will forget the loss of her two provinces, Alsace and Lorraine, in 1871, and is itching for a fight. England will not permit Germany to make Agadir a German port only—Agadir must be a seaport open to every ship that sails. Thirty-seven per cent of the commerce of Morocco is British, nine per cent German.

I am not a stand pat Tory, yet I admire the man who like Arthur Balfour says he can afford to wait and let Asquith's veto bill wait. Mr. Balfour sees that the second chamber or House of Lords will veto the two measures which Asquith and his ministry are likely to pass, namely, home rule for Ireland and the disestablishment and disendowment of the Episcopal church in Wales. Note that the Lords must veto these bills twice, and two years between these vetoes. As I said, Mr. Balfour sees that during these two years the country may overthrow Asquith and his crew and put the Tories in power. Just as our sage Senator Lodge in his waiting game today says, "Let the electors give their next verdict and you will see some land slides."

I have not had the pleasure of seeing Mr. J. W. Bell since his election to an important position in our town. I take this chance of saying that though he is a Tory he is a gentleman and an honest man. He raises good potatoes and his hens lay excellent eggs.

IAN McDOUGALL.

ATTRACTIONS AT THE THEATRES

Boston Theatres

Tremont—"Excuse Me."
Boston—"The Girl in the Taxi."
Majestic—"Old Jed Prouty."
Shubert—"Over Night."
Grand Opera House—"Across the Pacific."

TREMONT

"Excuse Me," the comedy by Rupert Hughes, which opened this week at the Tremont theatre, is exceedingly merry and bright and contains much good acting. The farce has had a fine run in New York. The idea of the piece is novel and is capable of furnishing much amusement.

MAJESTIC

"Old Jed Prouty," a play of country life in Maine, of the "Old Homestead" type, is at the Majestic. The play is the story of the regeneration of the villager who has left his home because he thought his wife untrue.

SHUBERT

"Over Night," a very funny piece, is making a hit at the Shubert theatre. Although this is the third week of its run, the popularity of the piece has not waned in the least. From start to finish the play holds the interest of the audience.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Patriotism is the keynote of "Across the Pacific," playing at the Opera House this week. Willie Live with his ever-present camera, is the life of the piece, provoking much amusement. At the most inopportune moment he is sure to appear, upsetting all plans and arrangements.

An Industrial City

One of the interesting features of the National Shoe and Leather Fair in Boston was the appearance of the new edition of "An Industrial City," the United Shoe Machinery's publication, describing the great industrial plant at Beverly. In honor of the Fair, the first issue has been called the "Shoe and Leather Week Edition," and every one of the visitors of the plant on the special trip was given a copy.

In addition to a description of the methods of running the big plant where 5000 employees receive $75,000 in wages each week, there appears for the first time a complete description of the welfare work inside and outside of the factory. There are views of the handsome new country club just given by the company to the employees; the athletic field, photographs of the industrial school conducted at the factory in conjunction with the state and public school authorities; the employees at play, the private hospital in the plant, and the well-known brass band composed of employees.

Another interesting page contains the copy of a letter sent by Miss Gertrude Beeks, secretary of the Welfare Department of the National Civic Federation, commending the company enthusiastically because of the wholesome welfare work system. The representative of the Federation evidently found after investigation that the strict injunction of the organization—that "welfare work must not take the place of wages"—had been generously observed, and this is mentioned in the commendatory letter. Miss Beeks also says:—

"One strong point in praise of this work is the spirit shown by the company, which provides these improvements because it is right. Your employees are treated as human beings, in that the equipment provided in connection with the welfare features is the best. To express to your company the appreciation I feel concerning its helpfulness to the whole

BOSTON

That sparkling and speedy French farce, "The Girl in the Taxi," began its two weeks' engagement at the Boston theatre last Monday evening before an audience that crowded the big playhouse to the last inch of standing room. Judging by the large attendance and the enthusiastic applause and laughter the sprightly play which ran in Boston for three months last summer, is going to prove a very welcome visitor this season.

The company presenting "The Girl in the Taxi" at the Boston theatre is headed by Bobby Barry, one of the younger well-known comedians of the George M. Cohan type. Mr. Barry, who is a son of old "Billy" Barry, the eminent comedian, by the way, gave us a laughable picture of a youth on his first outing with a member of the opposite sex. His scenes in the restaurant, where he attempts to buy Mignon, "the taxi girl," a twenty dollar bill with five dollars in his pocket, aroused the greatest merriment and showed him to be a comedian of great subtlety and unusual talent.

Julie Ring was the dashing Mignon and she is to be commended for a clever impersonation of the role of the lady with tight gowns and loose morals who has a fondness for late suppers and youths with a bank roll.

The play will terminate its brief engagement September 2nd. Matinees are played Wednesday and Saturday and a feature of this engagement is the announcement that 800 orchestra seats are now reserved at $1.00.

movement in the cause of welfare work would be to comment upon all the points so well covered by the article above mentioned. I must congratulate you upon the preventive work, through ventilation devices, safeguards against accidents, light workrooms, lunch rooms and other sanitary arrangements making for good health. When all employers so recognize their full duty, the great need for tuberculosis sanitariums and almshouses will be materially reduced. The participation of the officials in the welfare activities also is gratifying.

THE END OF TUBERCULOSIS

Stamping Out the Disease.

By HOMER FOLKE.

There is absolute unanimity, too, among our expert authorities (as there was not a decade ago) as to just what we need to do in order to prevent tuberculosis. We must have general public education as to the nature and symptoms of the disease, and we have it. We must have reporting of cases by physicians, and we are getting it. We must have free dispensaries in every city and considerable village at which any person can secure an expert and thorough diagnosis of his condition and adequate instructions as to what he must do, and we are getting dispensaries. We must have visiting nurses to visit the patients in their homes and instruct them, not once, but many times, in the protection of their households. We are getting visiting nurses. We need, above all, hospitals in the larger cities and a county hospital in every county, and we are getting hospitals.

Wise Men and Women Know that most of the sicknesses of life come from inactive bowels and from unhealthy condition of the organs of digestion. If your digestive system is not working right, your food does not nourish you—poor blood and weakness follow; if your bowels are inactive—waste matter poisons the whole system and serious sickness is sure to follow. To take promptly is to save yourself trouble and expense. Gentle, but quick; safe, but thorough, they enable the bowels to carry away waste matter naturally and tone up the whole digestive system. They will not injure the most delicate. They help you to get your bowels and your digestive organs in that condition when they can take good care of themselves and of you. Beecham's Pills

Paragon Park and Palm Garden

Manager George A. Dodge will soon bring to a close the seventh and most successful season of Paragon Park and its famous palm garden at Nantasket Beach. Constant improvements year after year in every department of the park's show features, amusements, architectural attractions, electric lighting, not forgetting the frequent enlargement of the capacity of the palm garden, have brought this resort to a state of perfection that is the envy of all amusement parks on the Atlantic coast. The keynote of the great popularity of Paragon Park is doubtless its unique palm garden with its great variety of entertainment.

The "Cabaret Show" in the palm garden every evening from 9 to 11 o'clock continues to be a great drawing card. As promptly as 9 o'clock comes around the palm garden is filled to overflowing for the festivities which are so unique and surprising. The regular season of the Park will close on Labor Day, September 3, as usual, but the palm garden will remain open until Sunday, September 10.

Derry A. A. 4, Ballardvale 3

The Ballardvale baseball team went to Derry, N. H., Saturday afternoon and were defeated in a close and well-played contest by a score of 4 to 3. It was a pitchers' battle with the honors about even up to the seventh inning, when with the score 3 to 2 in favor of Ballardvale, White made a home run drive over the fence, scoring Richards ahead of him. While Ballardvale fought gamely to the end they could not regain the lead. Both teams played good ball and the contest was close and exciting from beginning to end.

BASEBALL SCORES.

Odd Way the Plays Were Recorded Back in the Sixties.

The baseball public of today, accustomed to the minute reporting of games, wherein each run is compounded and many a play analyzed, is offered the account of a game played in Syracuse in 1863. The contestants were the Central City of Syracuse and the Athletics of Philadelphia, and the score was 41 to 12.

The game was delayed a half hour by the difficulty in finding an umpire. Then the report goes on to state:

"The game opened loosely upon both sides, and at the end of the first innings the score stood Athletics 5, Central City 4, each side making its tallies promptly from the loose playing of the out club. After the first inning the Athletics played more carefully, while the Central City grew more careless until the fifth inning, when they became more demoralized than was the Union army at the battle of Bull Run.

"Considerable dissatisfaction was manifested and expressed, and in two innings rightfully so, at the evident one sided decisions of the umpire.

"We will not particularize, but suffice to say that several of the players on both sides did well, while others, especially the Central City side, were not fully up to their standard efforts. The following is the score:

How Pat Was Working When Eileen Arrived

A Labor Day Story

By NORA C. MCARTHY

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Pat," said Eileen when Pat started for America, "I hope you won't get mixed up in the labor troubles in that country. They say sometimes there's fightin', and Ol'm skeert or yer gittin' kilt."

"Niver moind, sweetheart, Ol'll take good care o' meself ag'in yer comin' over to line me and we'll be married and live in a nice little shanty and have a pig and a goat and live lolke gintle folk."

"But they say, Pat, that in America they don't have pigs. Anyway, they don't keep 'em in the house. Ol've heard that the pigs is all kep' together and killed together—sometimes a mather of tin or a dozen at one kiltin'."

"That won't mather to us. We'll have one just to remind us of home. And we'll have the shanty Ol'm tellin' ye about wid the ladder goin' up to the second story."

"Och, Pat, they don't have ladders in America, they have stairs."

"Well, we'll have a ladder in our shanty just as we'll have the pig. And by that same token we'll have a coo for milk."

"But Ol'm told people don't keep coos of their own in that country. All the milk is put in a big tub and it's peddled out in wagons."

"But we'll have the coo for the same reason we'll have the pig and the ladder, to remind us of our beautiful island and the home one couldn't have in it, because we're too poor. But in America Ol'll git together the money for the shanty and the pig and the ladder and the coo, and we'll live like fightin' cocks."

So Pat folded the poor girl in his arms, the tears streaming down her cheeks at parting with him.

"What's the mather, darlin'?" he said, patting her fondly. "Don't be cryin'. It'll not be long before I find ye the money to come over to me, and be the toime ye git there Ol'll have the shanty ready, so ye'll think ye're right here in ould Oirland."

"Oh, Pat, Ol'm feared ye won't succeed!"

And so they parted, Pat with no more money in his pocket than to take him in the steerage across the ocean. The pair were too simple and uneducated to have formed any idea of America. Their dream of a home there was such as they might have at home had they the means to establish it, where the pig and the cow and themselves might all live together in domestic harmony.

Since Pat could not write, his letters from the new country, written by a friend, were of the simplest character. He realized that even if he could write his own letters he would never be able to convey to Eileen's simple mind the real America. He was too wise to attempt it. At first his letters began in the usual way with his class:

I take my pen in hand to write you a few lines to say that I'm in good health, thanks be to God, hoping that you are the same at the present time.

Then followed hopes that the crops would be abundant and that different members of the family were well. One poor speller who indited a letter for Pat wrote, "This letter comes hoping that you are well as I am, thanks be to God!"

"What's that?" said Eileen. "It comes hopin'?" Ol' thacht it come by a ship."

Pat remained several years in America before he sent for Eileen. When he got a start he wrote, "Darlint, Ol'm buildin' the shanty." When he made some money he wrote, "Ol've bought the pig." Then the cow followed, his shanty was ready and Pat was ready to send the passage money that was to bring his sweetheart to him in America.

Before starting Eileen wrote that she wished he could bring the shanty and the pig and the cow to Ireland, but she supposed that if he could he wouldn't be able to make the money necessary to keep up the establishment. So she made her preparation to join him.

Pat knew the day she sailed and the day the steamer was due in New York. He wrote her that she would arrive on a holiday they kept in America called Labor day. He would be busy on that day, and he would send his friend, Mike Fogarty, to the steamer to meet her and bring her to where he was working. Eileen thought Pat must be very industrious to work on a holiday, and she was glad and proud of him.

When the ship came up to the dock Eileen saw a man on it looking as if he might be Fogarty, and he was.

"Pat told me," he said, "to take ye where he's workin', and I will." He led Eileen to a street where great crowds were waiting for something to happen. Then came a band of music and men with sashes and scarfs on rascolling horses. Among these men in a black clawhammer coat and silk hat she saw her Pat.

Pat caught sight of her and, dismounting, joined her.

"Is this the way ye're workin'?" she asked, astonished.

"Take her to the shanty," said Pat to Fogarty, "and Ol'll be there directly."

Fogarty led the girl to a five story tenement house, where on the third floor she was ushered into a nicely furnished apartment.

"La sakes!" she exclaimed. "Did Pat earn the money for this ridin' on a horse wid a piece o' stove pipe on his head and a blue ribbon across him?"

LOVE FOR PASTIME

By RUTH GRAHAM

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Whether in the main we are retrograding or improving, there is one matter in which men have been steadily growing better. That is in their treatment of women. Half a century ago among young men of the world there was not the high sense of honor in the treatment of women there is now.

In the days of palatial steamboats, as they were called, on the Mississippi Roland Storms, traveling between St. Louis and New Orleans, met on the boat Adele Southwood, a young girl seventeen years old. Storms, who was ten years Miss Southwood's senior, had considered making a "conquest" now and then one of those accomplishments that was to be expected of a young swell of the period. To him love was a game in which all was fair. If beaten at it he would have considered that nothing remained for him but to take the consequences. If he beat the girl it was her part to grin and bear it.

Miss Southwood was not only ignorant of such warfare, but was a girl of deep feeling. She and Storms would sit on the guards during the day looking out upon the ever changing panorama, now passing under some high bluff, now sailing above the surrounding lowlands on a river built up by the levees. In the evening they would go up on to the hurricane deck, watching the lights on the shore go by and, when the boat stopped to "wood up," looking down on the line of deck hands in the glare of pitch pine knots transferring a wood pile to the boat for fuel.

All this was new to Miss Southwood, and what was not only new but much more fascinating to an impressionable girl was having a young man in constant attendance, saying pleasant things to her, one moment, talking seriously the next and finally laughing at her for being so matter of fact. In this way he kept her in a puzzled state as to whether a mature man was really falling in love with her, a child of a girl, or whether he considered her merely a child. Storms before reaching the Crescent City talked love to her—such love as pertains to the emotions without any prosaic references to marriage. But she was too unsophisticated to consider this. To her it was spontaneous love, something she had never experienced before and the more serious features of which were still a blank to her.

At New Orleans the two parted, Miss Southwood to remain there for the winter, which was coming on, Mr. Storms going by the gulf of Mexico to Texas. The young girl considered that the event of her life had occurred, the young man that a pleasant episode had occurred to relieve the tedium of steamboat travel. This was what he considered it at the time. He did not know that a seed had been planted in his heart which was not destined to germinate for a long while. He knew that this case was in many respects different from his many other affairs, but he did not consider it any more serious.

It was four years before he met Miss Southwood again. He was walking on the principal street of Cincinnati, swinging a cane, a "beaver" on his head, a velvet collar on his frock coat, a profusion of cravat on his bosom, his tight trousers strapped down over his instep, in short, dressed for a swell of the period, when he met, in a diminutive bonnet of pink silk, one of the sweetest faces he had ever beheld. It belonged to a lady about twenty-one years old, and she was looking at him intently. In an instant he recognized the girl he had flirted with on the Mississippi and jilted at New Orleans.

Naturally he was embarrassed. There was no expression in Miss Southwood's face sufficiently defined for him to tell how she felt toward him. He stopped to speak to her, standing uncovered, and asked if he might walk with her. Receiving permission, he joined her, stammering things to her which she, on her part, received with composure. She had been through the agony of getting over a first love and a first jilt, and he could see no traces of suffering, of reproach or of forgiveness. All seemed to be neutralized or, rather, fused into an absolute nothingness.

Storms walked with her some ten minutes, at first trying to regain his equipoise, then to discover some indication of the young lady's feelings toward him. In the latter he failed. But since there was no indication of unfriendliness he made bold to hint that he would like to renew the acquaintance. Before parting Miss Southwood invited him to come to see her the next afternoon at 2 o'clock. He accepted, and they parted.

At the appointed hour Storms, having summoned up all his will power, courage, adroitness to win again and win to keep what he had won and thrown away, went to call on Miss Southwood. He found a number of guests present, and a few minutes after his entrance the lady stood up to be married.

This was Roland Storms' last affair of the heart. He never took any interest in another, for he never recovered from this one. He died a bachelor and an old man.

Since that day, while youth is the same and affairs of the heart are the same, what would have then been considered a feather in a fashionable young man's cap is now held to be dishonorable.

Only Transitory.

Prospective Tenant—I like the house, but I don't like that huge building in front. It's such a dreary outlook.

Agent—Oh, but that's only a gunpowder factory. It might explode any day.—London Opinion.

She Spoke Out.

Father (to his daughter whom he sees whispering to her mother)—Elsie, how often have I told you not to do that? Speak out if you want anything.

Elsie—Well, father, I wanted to know why the lady near me has such a red nose.—Fliegende Blätter.

How Indeed?

The Reformer—Ah, friend, what we are striving for is fewer overcrowded slums, larger villages, more pleasure for the people and less drink.

The Unconverted One—But 'ow are we going to 'ave more pleasure if we 'as less beer?—Everybody's Weekly.

Unless.

Townsend—Can a man live or $1 a day?

Bears—Certainly, unless he's so prodigal as to lay something aside for a rainy day, keep up his insurance, eat when he's hungry, buy clothes and pay his bills.—New York Press.

Tenderer.

Customer—What's this, waiter?

Waiter—That's sole, sir.

Customer—Well, just take it away and bring me a bit of the upper with the eyelets removed.—London Opinion.

An Honest Confession.

The Friend—Well, I see you have your sign out. Getting any practice?

Young Doctor—Yes, a little. There goes one of my funerals now.—Chicago News.

On View.

"I hear they have a family skeleton."

"Yes, she was in the surf this morning."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
